The Different Realities of the League of Legends Intellectual Property

"Time is an adventure, if you know when to look."

— Pulsefire Ezreal

In the beginning, there was nothingness, and then, the main universe along with the Multiverse came to be. The multiverse contains both the timeline as well as its connected alternate timelines, such as those created by Ekko and Zilean. There are also multiverses for each of the different universes commonly referred to as "skin universes" or just "alternate universes".

Alternate universe characters, especially champions, are depicted with different appearances and various degrees of backstory changes from the ones in the main universe. Some champions may exist in an alternate universe without being a part of any skin line from that universe, such as Karthus in High Noon Gothic. Some skin lines or elements of them may also exist in multiple alternate universes, like the Culinary Masters skin line which exists in at least 50 different universes, including Star Guardian.

Trivia

- Runeterra Legacy use to be the primary universe and canon lore of the League of Legends intellectual property. The lore itself had direct connections to what players did within the game of League of Legends, such as the Ionia vs Noxus event and the Journal of Justice. Since 2014 ( Shurima lore update event) it has been mostly abandoned and replaced with the Runeterra Prime universe and the Marauders Versus Wardens skin universe (an alternate Runeterra Legacy timeline). Most character story biographies and Judgments of the "old" lore are archived in the old lore category.
- Several universes have connections to other universes or characters from those universes due to skin biographies, short stories, splash art, and/or quotes.
- The League of Legends intellectual property has both multiverse and omniverse concepts.
- Currently the only universe stated to not be part of the larger League of Legends omniverse is the Valorant universe, despite obvious symbolism and references (and even connections with RiotX Arcane) to the League of Legends intellectual property that contradict this statement.
